Subject: Where have all the real people in government gone???

Hello,

I remember my first fish I ever caught. My uncle and aunt took me to a little creek when I was 8 years old and I caught a trout. To this day my perfect day is a day on the water, fishing. Both my daughter and son, both young adults now are active fishermen.

Nothing gives me more pride than to see my daughter teach her boyfriend how to clean fish. Or my son, passing up a party to go fishing with dad. Just last weekend, my daughter and her boyfriend spent 3 days with me fishing in San Pablo Bay in our boat Salty Dawg. We launched out of Loc Lomond Marina (San Rafael), and got a 3 day quest slip there to use as a base. Since we are from Reno, Nevada, making these short little weekend getaways to fish usually costs us $500.00 + dollars (plus of course $110.00 non resident fishing license). Money spent in California include: gas for truck, 2 bridge tolls, dinner in Auburn, slip fees in San Rafael, bait from Western Bait & Tackle, Groceries from Loc Lomond Grocery, Fresh Crab for dinner from Western Sea Food, Ice, Beer, Gas For Boat, Dinner in Auburn on way home.

The memories from weekend - priceless.

So would you rather make decisions based on corruption and ignorance that only benefit wealthy and a select few hypocritical people. Or would you rather make decisions based on real life people that want to enjoy the outdoors with family and friends enjoying a great American pastime of fishing??

What I have seen so far in the MLPL process is that there appears to be alot of "one side biased under the table dealing" going on. And lot of SPINELESS people making decisions against the will of the majority.

Kind regards
